

Chris Myers

With more than 20 years in broadcasting, Chris Myers has covered all of the sports world's premiere events, including the Super Bowl, World Series, NBA Finals, NCAA Final Four, The Masters and U.S. Open Golf, Kentucky Derby, the Olympics and the Daytona 500. In 1990, Myers received an Emmy Award in the Sports Features category as an anchor/reporter.

Chris Myers joined Fox Sports Radio as the mid-day co-host with Steve Lyons for the network debut in September 2000. "Myers & Lyons" aired on the network for two years before he decided to concentrate on his duties for Fox Television. He remained with the radio network in a part-time capacity until taking over as co-host of "The Drive" in November 2004 and continues on today.

Myers joined Fox Television in December of 1998 as one of the original anchors of The National Sports Report and the weekly sports magazine program Goin' Deep.

He currently hosts NASCAR coverage on Fox, FX and Fox Sports Net. In addition, Myers is a reporter on Fox Sports' coverage of the NFL and Major League Baseball.

Prior to joining Fox Sports Radio & Television, Myers spent 11 years at ESPN reporting and anchoring SportsCenter and Baseball Tonight as well as hosting Up Close from 1994 to 1998. As host of that show, he conducted the first live interview with OJ Simpson after his acquittal.

Myers, a native of Miami, garnered his first major break in broadcasting as a 16-year old student when he hosted his own show on WKAT-AM 1360, interviewing such sports heavy hitters as Muhammad Ali and Don Shula.

Myers is married and resides in Southern California
