NICK SCHIFRIN

Nick Schifrin is the foreign affairs and defense correspondent for PBS NewsHour, based in Washington, D.C. He also hosts PBS News' Compass Points, where he leads expert discussions on major global issues, examining international conflicts, rising tensions, and their implications for U.S. interests.

Schifrin also leads NewsHour's foreign reporting and has created week-long, in-depth series for NewsHour from China, Russia, Ukraine, Nigeria, Egypt, Kenya, Cuba, Mexico, and the Baltics. The PBS NewsHour series "Inside Putin's Russia" won a 2018 Peabody Award and the National Press Club's Edwin M. Hood Award for Diplomatic Correspondence. In November 2020, Schifrin received the American Academy of Diplomacy's Arthur Ross Media Award for Distinguished Reporting and Analysis of Foreign Affairs.

Prior to PBS, Schifrin was Al Jazeera America's Middle East correspondent. He led the channel's coverage of the 2014 war in Gaza; reported on the Syrian war from Syria's Turkish, Lebanese and Jordanian borders; and covered the conflict in and annexation of Crimea. He won an Overseas Press Club award for his Gaza coverage and a National Headliners Award for his Ukraine coverage.

From 2008-2012, Schifrin served as the ABC News correspondent in Afghanistan and Pakistan. In 2011 he was one of the first journalists to arrive in Abbottabad, Pakistan after Osama bin Laden's death and delivered one of the year's biggest exclusives: the first video from inside bin Laden's compound. His reporting helped ABC News win an Edward R. Murrow award for its bin Laden coverage. He ran the Islamabad and Kabul bureaus for nearly four years, beginning at age 28.

He is a Council on Foreign Relations term member, and an Overseas Press Club Foundation board member. He earned a bachelor's degree from Columbia University and a master's in international relations from the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), where he graduated with distinction.
