SEGUN ODULOWU

Segun Oduolowu is the proud son of Nigerian immigrant parents. He's a television host, entertainment journalist, and media personality currently hosting Boston Globe Today. Created in a partnership with NESN, Boston Globe Today is televised five days a week and published on globe.com. Prior to BGT, Segun was a correspondent for PEOPLE (The TV Show!), a nationally syndicated entertainment news magazine television show. In 2021, he executive produced "Protect or Neglect," a documentary focused on police brutality and underserved communities for the Bounce television network.

Over the years, Segun Oduolowu has appeared regularly on Good Morning America, The Today Show, CNN, NBC News Now, Revolt TV, Access Hollywood, and The Wendy Williams Show and has contributed to international programs for CNN and the BBC.

When the bright lights turn off, Segun is an educator and mentor. He was a former high school English teacher and has tutored and worked with some of the brightest "young stars" in Southern California. Oduolowu is also a former University of Houston basketball player, where he harnessed his belief that without commitment you'll never start and without consistency you'll never finish. In partnership with the Aim High Foundation of Southern California and its creator, 2-time NBA champion Kenny Smith, Segun has coached over a dozen pupils to successfully earn Division I basketball scholarships. His former mentees can be found in the top universities throughout the United States.
