DAN HAMPTON

Dan Hampton is a New York Times bestselling author of nine books published by HarperCollins and Macmillan, a former U.S. Air Force fighter pilot, and a highly decorated veteran. Widely recognized as one of the most experienced combat aviators of his generation, Hampton has flown 186 missions in high-risk environments and brings unmatched credibility to discussions on modern warfare, leadership, and global security.

In a remarkable and historic return to combat, Hampton recently flew F-16 missions in Ukraine, offering a rare, firsthand perspective on one of the most consequential conflicts shaping today's geopolitical landscape. His experience on the front lines provides audiences with an unfiltered, deeply informed understanding of the war, its strategic implications, and the evolving nature of modern combat.

Equally compelling is Hampton's personal story of resilience and peak performance. At age 61, after nearly two decades away from a fighter cockpit, he met the extraordinary physical and mental demands required to return to active combat—potentially becoming the oldest active combat pilot in history, a distinction currently under review by Guinness World Records. His journey offers powerful insights into discipline, adaptability, and pushing human limits under extreme pressure.

Following his military career as a command fighter pilot and instructor, Hampton became a sought-after consultant on foreign affairs, intelligence, counterterrorism, military, and aviation issues. He has provided expert analysis for major media outlets including CNN, Fox News, MSNBC, the BBC, Newsmax, and NPR, and has appeared on programs such as Bill O'Reilly, Hannity, The Cycle, and Anderson Cooper 360. He has also served as an aviation expert for A&E/History Channel's "Finding Amelia" and "Ancient Aliens," as well as Travel Channel's "Alaska Triangle," and was featured in Breitling's Anthem campaign.

As an author, Hampton has written eight acclaimed historical nonfiction works and one novel, earning New York Times bestseller status for his gripping, meticulously researched accounts of air combat and military history. His books are widely praised for bringing readers inside the cockpit while illuminating the broader strategic and human dimensions of war.

For corporate leaders, policymakers, defense organizations, and global investors, Hampton delivers a rare and timely perspective on risk, leadership, and the realities of operating in complex international environments. His keynotes combine gripping storytelling with actionable insights, leaving audiences with a deeper understanding of both global conflict and the mindset required to perform at the highest level.

Hampton holds a Master of Arts from Dartmouth College, a Master of Science in Aeronautics, and a Bachelor of Arts in Architecture and Environmental Design from Texas A&M University.
